

MLA Style Guide (8th Edition)

The following are examples and explanations that follow the MLA Handbook Eighth Edition. This handout is intended as a guide. If you have specific questions, always check with your instructor.

Note: Examples in this handout may be single-spaced to conserve paper. ALWAYS double-space between ALL lines.

IN-TEXT CITATION

In addition to providing a works cited list at the end of your paper, you must also cite your sources within your paper by using in-text citations. You must cite direct quotes, paraphrases or summaries of someone else's words, as well as facts, figures and ideas that are someone else's works.

1. Single author

Include the author's last name and the page number when your text does not include this information.	Straightedge could not be contained, and it "quickly migrated beyond D.C. to become a movement all over the United States" (Moore 61).
When your text names the author, put only the page number in parentheses.	Moore observes that straightedge "quickly migrated beyond D.C. to become a movement all over the United States" (61).

2. Two authors

Give the last name of each author, and the page number in the citation.	The organization could then argue that "copyright ownership arises from and begins upon creation of a work" (Moser and Slay 48).
When you name both authors in the text, put only the page number in parentheses.	Moser and Slay point out that "copyright ownership arises from and begins upon creation of a work" (48).

3. Three or more authors

Include only the first author's name followed by "et al." (which is Latin for "and others").	The authors claim that one cause of obesity in the United States is government-funded farm subsidies (Franck et al. 327).

4. Author unknown

If the author's name is not available, use the title of the work and page or paragraph. Note: Titles of books are italicized, titles of articles are put in quotation marks.	The numbers continue to increase in the last 30 years, and "the size of the U.S. workforce has grown from about 75 million to over 115 million workers" ("Gender Pay" 8).

5. Page number unknown

If a work has no page numbers, such as website articles, you do not need to give paragraph numbers. The author name or article name should correspond to the Works Cited entry.	The activists are trying to “incorporate traditional and cultural values without compromising the goal of women’s empowerment” (Powell).

6. Indirect sources

When you paraphrase or quote information that has already been quoted from another source, you must put “qtd. in” before the indirect source.	Ellen Bialystok explains, “People talk more slowly and clearly to children in short, simple sentences” (qtd. in Robson 33).

7. Encyclopedia or dictionary entry

If the dictionary or encyclopedia entry does not have an author, use the word or entry in your quotation marks in your citation.	Of course, in practice, “the location of sovereignty remained controversial” (“Federalism”).

8. Selection in an anthology

When using a selection from an anthology, use the name of the author of the selection, not the editor of the anthology in the in-text citation.	In fact, in the essay “What If Shakespeare Had a Sister?” she says, “to have a room of her own, let alone a quiet room or a sound-proof room, was out of the question...” (Woolf 1140).

9. Poetry

When quoting a single line from a poem, only include the line number in p	In Anne Sexton’s “The Lost Ingredient” she writes, “Today is made of yesterday” (21).
When quoting between one and three lines from a poem, use a backslash (/) to separate line breaks. For a stanza break, use two backslashes (//).	In Adrienne Rich’s poem “Diving into the Wreck” she writes, “I go down. / Rung after rung and still / the oxygen immerses me....” (22-24).

10. Audio or video media

For all time-based media, cite the time by hours, minutes, and seconds as displayed on your media player, separating the numbers with colons.	It’s true there have been many advances, “but as scientists make great strides in genetic engineering, we have begun to face uncomfortable issues” (“Robots” 00:31:24-26).

WORKS CITED

At the end of your paper, you will have a separate works cited page. In the list of works cited, you will alphabetically list all of the sources that you quoted, paraphrased, or summarized throughout your paper. Each entry that you used in-text citations for will have a corresponding entry on your works cited page.

You will cite your sources by listing the MLA core elements. It does not matter what format your source is (it could be a journal article, a web page, or a DVD), what matters is the core elements. So ask yourself “Who is the author? What is the title? What version is it?” and so on. Notice the punctuation that is used after each core element in the chart on the right.

- 1 Author.
- 2 Title of source.
- 3 Title of container,
- 4 Other contributors,
- 5 Version,
- 6 Number,
- 7 Publisher,
- 8 Publication date,
- 9 Location.

There are a few optional elements that you can choose to include, depending on their importance to your source. For example, date of access for online materials is optional, but you may want to include that information, since online works can change at any time. Date of access is especially important to include when the online source does not have a publication date listed. URLs are also optional. They can be outdated quickly, but they can also provide valuable information on how to find the source, so check with your instructor to see if they prefer that you include them or not on the works cited list. When including URLs, note that MLA only requires the www. address, so eliminate all http:// or https:// when citing. Consult the MLA Handbook for the entire list of optional elements.

Author Format for the List of Works Cited.

Depending on the number and type of authors, there are different ways to format their names on the works cited page. The chart below explains how to format some of the author types.

Number of Authors	Format	Example
No author	If there is no author, alphabetize by title.
One author	Author's last name, comma, first name (and middle initial if given) ending with a period.	Dillard, Annie.
Two authors	Begin with the first author's last name, comma, first name, comma, the word “and” then the second name in normal order .	Bezuidenhout, Louise, and Chandre Gould.
Three or more authors	If there are three or more authors, include only the first author's name, followed by a comma, then “et al.”	Leech, Geoffrey, et al.
Editor(s)	If the book has an editor or multiple editors, the “author” is the person(s) who assembled the work. Add their role after their names.	Strand, Mark, and Eavan Boland, editors.
Corporate author	If the author of the work is a corporate author, alphabetize by the name of the institution, association, or government agency.	Massachusetts Department of Higher Education.

Books

Basic format	Author(s). Title of book . Publisher, Year of publication.
One author	Dillard, Annie. The Writing Life . HarperCollins Publishers, 1989.
Two authors	Thompson, Judith and Marjorie Stone. Literary Couplings : Writing Couples, Collaborators, and the Construction of Authorship . University of Wisconsin Press, 2006.

Include the date and time it was posted.

MLA Paper Format

A paper in MLA format should follow these formatting guidelines:

1. Do not make a title page unless your instructor specifically requests one.
2. Use 1" margins on the top, bottom, and sides of your text. Do not justify to the right margin.
3. Use a readable font (e.g. Arial or Times New Roman) and type size (e.g. 12 point).
- 4. Double-space the entire paper.
5. In the upper left hand corner of the first page, type your name, the instructor's name, course number, and the date (be sure to double space between these lines).
6. Center the title. Do not underline, italicize, or put quotations around your title.
7. Indent the first word of each paragraph ½" (or five spaces from the left margin).
8. Type your last name and page number in the upper right hand corner, flush with the right margin and ½" from the top.
9. If a quotation has more than four typed lines, set it off from the text. Begin the block quote on a new line and indent each line 10 spaces from the margin. Double-space the entire quotation. Do not add quotation marks. A colon usually introduces the quote and the parenthetical citation is given at the end, after the final period.

The diagram shows a sample page with the following elements and callouts:

- Callout 5: Points to the header information in the top left corner: Anna Orlov, Professor Willis, English 101, and 17 March 2009.
- Callout 6: Points to the page number '1' in the top right corner.
- Callout 7: Points to the first word of the first paragraph, 'As', which is indented.
- Callout 8: Points to the author's name 'Orlov' in the top right corner.
- Callout 9: Points to a block quotation that is indented from both the left and right margins.

Online Monitoring: A Threat to Employee Privacy in the Wired Workplace

As the Internet has become an integral tool of businesses, company policies on Internet usage have become as common as policies regarding vacation days or sexual harassment. A 2005 study by the American Management Association and ePolicy Institute found that 76% of companies monitor employees' use of the Web, and the number of companies that block employees' access to certain Websites has increased 27% since 2001 (1). Unlike other company rules, however, Internet usage policies often include language authorizing companies to secretly monitor their employees, a practice that raises questions about rights in the workplace. Although companies often have legitimate concerns that lead them to monitor employees' Internet usage – from expensive security breaches to reduced productivity – the benefits of electronic surveillance are outweighed by its costs to employees' privacy and autonomy.

While surveillance of employees is not a new phenomenon, electronic surveillance allows employers to monitor workers with unprecedented efficiency. In his book The Naked Employee, Frederick Lane describes offline ways in which employers have been permitted to intrude on employees' privacy for decades, such as drug testing, background checks, psychological exams, lie detector tests, and in-store video surveillance. The difference between these old methods of data gathering and electronic surveillance involves quantity:

Technology makes it possible for employers to gather enormous amounts of data about employees, often far beyond what is necessary to satisfy safety or productivity concerns. And the trends that drive technology – faster, smaller, cheaper – make it possible for larger and larger numbers of employers to gather ever-greater amounts of personal data. (Lane 3-4)

Lane points out that employers can collect data whenever employees use their computers – for example, when they send e-mail, surf the Web, or even arrive at or depart from their workstations – the

MLA Works Cited Format

A Works Cited page in MLA format should follow these formatting guidelines:

1. Center the title – Works Cited – one inch from the top of the page. Do not underline, type in all capital letters or use quotation marks.
2. Your last name and page number should continue in the upper right hand corner.
3. Alphabetically list all of the sources you used in your research paper by author. If there is no author, alphabetize by the title.
4. Double space the entire page.
5. The first line of each entry is even with the left margin. Extra lines should be indented ½" (or five spaces from the left margin).

- 1: Points to the centered title "Works Cited". A vertical double-headed arrow indicates a 1-inch distance from the top of the page.
- 2: Points to the page number "9" in the upper right corner, preceded by the name "Hersh".
- 3: Points to the first line of the first entry, "Bremmer, Ian. 'Trading Block.' Time, vol. 185, no. 17, 11 May 2015, p. 14.", which is aligned with the left margin.
- 4: Points to the second line of the second entry, "Lombard, Kara-Jane. 'Art Crimes: The Governance of Hip Hop Graffiti.' Journal for Cultural Research, vol. 17, no. 3, 2013, pp. 255-278. Academic Search Premier. doi:10.1080/14797585.2012.752160.", which is indented ½ inch from the left margin. A horizontal double-headed arrow indicates this ½-inch indentation.
- 5: Points to the first line of the fifth entry, "Reddington, Helen. The Lost Women of Rock Music: Female Musicians of the Punk Era. Equinox Publishing Ltd, 2012. EBSCOhost.", which is aligned with the left margin.
